

The Caring Choice

Thousands of people have chosen a beautiful LifeArt coffin.

Families tell us that choosing a LifeArt coffin helped them focus on the life being remembered and cherished. The designs helped create a warm atmosphere at the funeral service.

LifeArt coffins are created by taking photos of our precious Australian timbers, or images supplied from photo galleries and families.

These images are then digitally printed, enabling us to make a personalised coffin in the time it takes to arrange a funeral service.

LifeArt coffins are environmentally friendly and they meet the standards required by the Funeral Industry for use in the funeral service, cremation or burial.

"It changes the way families feel while making the arrangements... they begin to talk about the full life the person lived, rather than just the sadness of their passing.

I have experienced how the LifeArt coffin has a surprising effect on the emotional climate of a funeral service." – Diane, Funeral Arranger en✓iroboard

Assured, fully functional, dignified, meets all industry requirements.

“The test program was identical to that used to evaluate timber coffins. Enviroboard passed the full testing regime”.

Tony Martin, Manager Physical Testing Branch, TestSafe Australia

The program consisted of various tests to ensure the coffin would be safe and reliable in all circumstances of a funeral service.

How much can an en✓iroboard Coffin carry

The coffin was successfully lifted with full carrying capacity to determine deflection or damage.

Do the handles work?

The handles can carry the maximum load.

Can en✓iroboard be refrigerated?

The coffins were loaded with sandbags and stored in a refrigerator at 3°C for one week.

Will the coffin crush when buried?

No deflection occurred with 250kg of sand on the lid. The coffin will not show crushing during a burial.

What if the coffin is accidentally dropped?

If dropped from shoulder height an enviroboard coffin will not split or break open.

enviroboard: the caring choice

"Leave the earth better than you found it."

LifeArt has developed a patented coffin that reduces the impact on the environment, while meeting all the requirements of a safe funeral.

Recycled material

Enviroboard uses some of the 1.6 million tonnes of cardboard and paper that is recycled each year in Australia.

Our patented sandwich construction creates light, strong and environmentally friendly coffins.

Uses 90% less timber

The enviroboard coffin uses approximately 90% less virgin wood fibre than a traditional coffin. Our forests are too precious to burn.

Reduces Landfill

By using recycled paper and cardboard, the enviroboard coffin reduces waste in our landfills.

No harmful chemicals

Unlike particleboard coffins, enviroboard does not contain adhesives that release formaldehyde.

Greenhouse friendly

Enviroboard coffins release less carbon emissions during the cremation process.

Industry standards

Enviroboard coffins have been independently tested and meet all regulatory and Funeral Industry requirements.

About LifeArt

LifeArt is an innovative wholly owned Australian company specialising in the manufacturer of the standard in personalised and environmentally friendly coffins to the Funeral Industry.

In a time of concern for diminishing forests, carbon emissions and climate change, LifeArt have created the world's first fully functional cardboard coffin.

Founding partners Natalie Verdon and Eckhard Kemmerer, were joined in 2007 by CEO David Jackson and an expanding team of dedicated professionals.

Since the formation of the company in 2004, thousands of people around Australia and New Zealand have chosen a memorable LifeArt coffin.

LifeArt is backed by investors committed to taking this environmentally and emotionally friendly product to the world.

Utilising the latest print technology, LifeArt creates truly personal, expressive coffins for a more memorable funeral. LifeArt can supply your requested order to your funeral home within the three days normally required to arrange a funeral service.

With patents pending, there is significant interest from the public, funeral industry leaders and investors alike in Europe, Asia, the US and South America.
